Printing of every description neatly executed: such as Books, Pamphlets, Circulars, Cards, Handbills, etc., on as good terms as at any other office.

To the friends of Temperance and the public generally we now make our appeal in behalf of this paper. The publisher feeling it a matter of importance to the interest of the Temperance cause in the District, as well as the general interest of the cause, and having been, as he conceives, Providentially placed in a situation at this time when he can mingle this interest with that of the business men, and thereby render a double service to the community, and still further open a medium of communication by which our principles may be extended far and wide, at a cheap rate. He has purchased a printing establishment, so as not only to be able to put a daily paper regularly to press, but also a weekly; and still further, be able to do any other printing the public may be pleased to have done; and he assures them that they shall have no cause of complaint. He has made arrangements by which he can devote his time to the interest of the office and the paper; and, having employed Mr. Charles W.
Fenton, who will be always on the spot, to conduct the printing, he has no doubt but that general satisfaction will be given. We shall make arrangements to have the earliest news; also the proceedings of Congress.

We wish all who are indebted for the paper up to this time to pay up, as the affairs of the tri-weekly must be closed. They will perceive that we are about to give them a better paper, double the number, at the same price.

While the "COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN" will be devoted to the cause of Temperance, its columns will be enriched by original articles on subjects calculated to interest, instruct, and benefit its readers. It is intended so to blend variety, amusement, and instruction, as that the various tastes of its patrons may be (as far as it is practicable) gratified.
Commerce, Literature, and Science, and every other subject of interest, not inconsistent with Temperance and morality, will receive the earnest attention of the publishers.
Nothing of a sectarian, political, or personal character will be admitted.

A CARD.

THE subscriber begs leave to say to members of Congress and others, that he has several good rooms which he will let on accommodating terms, either furnished or unfurnished, located on the South side of Pennsylvania Avenue, between 9th and 10th streets, and equidistant between the Capitol and the public offices. I have also two of the best cellars in the city, which I will rent in part or the whole, or receive goods on storage.
This is a good opportunity for butchers or market people.
L. S. BECK.

THE WATERMAN'S ARMS.

A TALE OF DOVER.

BY EDWARD F. WELD.

(Concluded.)

Nearly a year had transpired since the occurrence of the melancholy event, and merry Christmas was at hand, with its joys and festivities. The afternoon of the day before was as mild and pleasant as though winter was but a mere nominal matter. If it was, the party at the Waterman's Arms did not mean that Christmas eve should be regarded as merely a name. The floor had been scrubbed as deal floor never was before, and it seemed almost a pity that the snow white boards should be chalked all over with representations of mermaids, sailors, ships, and every thing else, even to a picture, large as life and full as feeling, of Arthur, Duke of Wellington, Lord High Admiralty of the Cinque Ports; to whom the artist had given a nose much like the flue of an anchor, and certainly not much smaller. And there was Meg, bustling about behind the bar, the most prominent of all; for the range of pewter mugs, polished like mirrors, reflected her person in a dozen spots at once. Her voice was everywhere, and upon the whole, it was a most admirable scene of confusion. Here were bought of verdant trees, piles of evergreens, poultry, baskets of cakes, lots of chubby faced children, all perfectly at home. The fixtures of the bar, sides of the room, and ceiling overhead, promised to rival even the floor in their decorations.

Busied as all were, each found time to address a few kind words to Alice, who had entered in company with the old man.
The latter leaned upon his staff, and slowly he turned his vacant eye from floor to ceiling, till it rested upon some of the men who were busy festooning the wall.

"Foolery!—foolery! I say!" he exclaimed, and struck the floor with his oaken staff. "I tell you, you are like children! Stop this hummery and man the boat! I never knew a Dover man to want telling of his duties before; and here now's a ship in the offing with his main royal yard a cock-bill for a pilot, and no boat off!"

"Our boats are out," said one in a respectful tone. "Aye, aye," he muttered, "it wasn't so once. I remember—I once had a boy! It wasn't so then—yes, yes, I remember now;" and his voice became choked with emotion. The allusion had called the tear to Alice's cheek, which observing, he gently laid his hand upon her shoulder, and kindly said, "nay—cry not, my daughter—he'll come back—surely he'll stay no longer! Yes, now I see—we are to celebrate your wedding! I'm getting old; don't think hard of it, they are right, let them dress the room—he deserves it."

Meg, with ready woman's wit, succeeded in persuading the old man to enter another room, and, uninterrupted, the preparations were resumed.

If Dover has brave boatmen, it has no less beautiful women, and this evening, judging by their smiling faces, happiness was theirs.
The fiddler drew his bow, and to the merry strain of "Money musk," away they went in the good old fashioned contradance, Meg leading off with a smile, grace, step and partner, many a younger belle might have felt proud of. Oh, but it was a glorious scene, and when many merry feet were busy, the very panes of glass, and pictures on the wall, seemed to have become animate to join in the gala.

There was one sad one there. Poor Alice, who could not persuade the old man to leave the house, and who now sat by his side, her head resting upon her hand, and her thoughts fixed on the loved and lost, The last Christmas dance at the Water-man's Arms, how different was it to her.
Then she was the blithe of the gay—he was her partner; and as she dwelt upon his memory, her tears fell thick and fast.

"Tush my daughter, this is no time for tears! I tell thee he'll be here soon," and then a faint glimpse of reason flashed across his mind, and they wept in unison. Their grief was theirs alone, for no one witnessed it, so absorbed were the others in their amusement.

"Holloa, here!" cried a sunburnt stranger, suddenly appearing in the open door.
"Holloa, I say! How's this? is n't it enough for one to back and fill off your harbor's mouth for half a day, with a signal set for a pilot, but he must pull ashore for one, and find none short of a frolic, and all hands at that?"

Unobserved by Alice, the old man had stole from her side, and advanced a few paces, regarding the stranger. "Aye, aye," said he, "it was n't so once. I had a boy then, and we said 'Dover again Deal!— let these fool—he'll soon be here, and all will be right then. He's the man for you; these are children, ha! ha!" He would have said more, but the stranger had sunk into a chair, and Alice was in a swoon.

The dancers had stopped, and while some were bearing Alice into the air, a shout of joy arose from those about the fainting man. The cry awoke her senses, and springing from the arms of her supporters, she pushed the bystanders aside, exclaiming, "My husband! my lost husband!" and tears of joy shone in the light of every cheek.

The old man leaned over them both and said, "Did I not tell thee right? Yes, yes—I knew he'd be back—Dover again Deal!" and so saying, he gave way like a child, and wept freely. When he dried his eyes, reason had resumed her throne, and the extravagant emotion of the other parties had become subdued.

Seated between his wife and father, in a few words the returned husband related his story. The boat was swamped by striking the wreck of a ship's foretopmast, recently carried away and towing by her side.
When thrown out of the boat he caught hold of some of the floating wreck, and so gained the deck of an American ship, bound from Holland for India. They fell in with no vessel which they could put him on board of, and he had performed the voyage thus far, she being again bound for Holland; but, leaking badly, she was desirous of making a harbor to repair, and new waited a pilot.

"There could not be a better time, there's now an hour's flood, and there is three fathoms water on the bar," said one of the hearers.

"I shall take her in myself!" said the old master, and it is now high time to be off!"

He did board the ship, though pilots enough went off to man her, and stout men to relieve the sailors at the pumps. And the old master did bring her in, no one questioning his right, yet they were ready, should he fail, to take his place.

"They are docking the ship, are they not Alice?" asked the husband, as the wild song of the sailor was distinctly heard as they sat in the best room. "It seems but a minute that I have been with you."

Upon their return the party brought a share of the ship's company with them.
They had also pressed a band of music into their service, which threw the humble fiddler into the shade. Discarded as Apollo, he took the place of Ganymede, which he resigned only to personate Bacchus in his last stages. Oh, but that was a night of merry making, and the oldest frequenters of the house declared that it never was the Waterman's Arms till then.

It is the Waterman's Arms still, though Meg has resigned the reign to Alice, who rules over all, save her husband, being too good a wife to think even of such a thing; and every sunny afternoon you may see an old man leaving his door, with a happy boy by his side, wending their way to the cliffs, to keep the lookout, which has never ceased to be his daily habit.

PENNSYLVANIA COLLEGE, Gettysburg,

Pennsylvania.

FACULTY AND INSTRUCTORS.

Rev. C. P. KRAUTH, D. D., President and Professor of Moral Science.

Rev. H. S. BAUGHER, A. M., Professor of Greek and Rhetoric.

Rev. M. JACOBS, A. M., Professor of Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, &c.

Rev. W. M. REYNOLDS, A. M., Professor of Latin, Mental Philosophy, &c.

M. L. STOEVEK, A. M., Professor of History and Principal of Preparatory Department.

Rev. C. A. HAY, A. M., Professor of German Language and Literature.

HERMAN HAUPT, A. M., Professor of Mathematics.
WM. HENRY HARRISON, A. B., Assistant Professor of Languages.

DAVID GILBERT, M. D., Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology.

Rev. J. G. MORRIS, D. D., Lecturer on Zoology.

WM. ALBAUGH, A. M., Tutor and Teacher in Preparatory Department.

H. R. GRIGER, Teacher of Writing.

The course of studies in Pennsylvania College is as extensive and substantial as that of any institution in the country. The Preparatory Department provides for instruction in all the branches of a thorough English business education, in addition to the Elements of the Mathematics and Classical Literature. The College course is arranged in the four classes usual in the institutions of this country.

The government of the students is as energetic as their circumstances seem to require. They attend at least two recitations a day, and the Faculty contemplate increasing them to three, Church and Bible Class on the Sabbath, and are visited in their rooms so frequently as to preclude the danger of any great irregularities. It is believed no institution in the United States has more exemplary young men in connexion with it. They are all required to lodge in the College edifice, special cases excepted.

The annual expenses are—for board, tuition and room rent, during the winter session $61 87 1-2; for the summer session, $41 87 1-2; washing, $10; wood, $3 00. Total expense, $116 75. Boarding can be had in town at $1 25 per week.

There are two vacations in the year, commencing on the third Thursdays of April and September; each of five weeks continuance.

The summer session will commence on Thursday, the 23d of May. The annual commencement takes place on the third Thursday in September.

The Trustees have recently made various arrangements which will increase the efficiency of the institution. They have increased the number of Professors and provided for the most ample instruction of the students.

Professor Baugher and Haupt are prepared to board boys and to exercise a special supervision over their studies and deportment, and Parents who may prefer placing their sons under their care, will be secure in regard to their proper management, under arrangements such as pertain to the family circle.

view, embraces every subject connected with Commerce, Manufactures and Political Economy, as follows: Commercial Legislation; Commercial History and Geography; Mercantile Biography; Descriptive, Statistical and Historical Accounts, of the various commodities which form the subject of Mercantile transactions; Port Charges; Tariffs; Customs and Excise Regulations; Commercial Statistics of the United States and the different countries of the world, with which we have intercourse, including their Physical Character, Population, Productions, Exports, Imports, Seaports, Monies, Weights, Measures, Finance and Banking Associations, and Enterprises connected with Commerce, embracing Fisheries, Incorporated Companies, Railroads, Canals, Steamboats, Docks, Post Offices, &c.; Principles of Commerce, Finance and Banking, with Practical and Historical Details and Illustrations; Commercial Law, and Mercantile Law Regulations and Decisions of Courts in the United States and Europe, including Insurance, Partnership, Principal and Agent, Bills of Exchange, Sale, Guaranty, Bankruptcy, Shipping and Navigation, &c., and whatever else shall tend to develop the resources of the country and the world, and illustrate the various topics bearing upon Commerce and Commercial Literature.

It has been, and will continue to be, the aim of the Editor and Proprietor of the Merchants' Magazine, to avoid everything of a party, political, or sectional bias or bearing, in the conduct of the work—opening its pages to the free and fair discussion of antagonistic doctrines connected with the great interests of Commerce, Agriculture, Manufactures and the Currency.

Complete sets of the Merchants' Magazine, embracing 12 semi-annual volumes, of about 600 large octavo pages each, bringing it down to June, 1844, inclusive, may be obtained at the Publisher's Office, 142 Fulton street, New York, at the subscription price.

Publishers of newspapers in the United States, by giving this advertisement two or three insertions and remitting Two Dollars to the Proprietor, will be entitled to the Magazine for one year.
